Related Applications

The present application claims the priority of U.S. Nonprovisional Application Serial No. 09/792,474 filed February 23, 2001 and U.S. Provisional Application Serial No. 60/184,258 filed February 23, 2000. Both applications are fully incorporated herein by reference.

Field of Invention

The present invention relates to Jewish religious ceremonial objects, namely religious scrolls known as Torahs, Megillahs, Mezuzzahs and Tefillin, and to methods of writing the same.

Background of the Invention

In Judaism, certain religious scrolls are holy or sacred and are regularly used in various ceremonies or in various religious practices. One such object is the Torah. In Jewish religious practice, the Torah is a specially prepared scroll containing the Hebrew text of the Five Books of Moses. This Torah scroll is handwritten on kosher parchment according to the strict dictates of a series of ancient laws and traditions extending back for thousands of years. At least one Torah scroll is maintained in every synagogue and is used each week during prayer services.

Another important religious scroll in Judaism is a Megillah. A Megillah, like the Torah, is also a religious scroll handwritten on kosher parchment. This scroll is used at certain times of the year for specific prayer services associated with specific religious events in the annual Jewish cycle of holidays and commemorations.
